I graduated from the University of Chinese Medicine and Pharmacology in Beijing in 1989, and was assistant doctor and assistant lecturer in the internal medicine, neurology and acupuncture departments from 1992 to 1996 at Dong Zi Men University Hospital. I was then in charge of the emergency department in the orthopaedics department and finally chief doctor in the orthopaedics department until 1997.

In 1997, I was appointed head of the Chinese medicine department at the El Paraiso Medicine Clinic in Spain. In 2010, I was recruited by Hôpital de la Tour as an acupuncturist, a specialist in Chinese medicine, acupuncture and Tuina massage.

I have excellent skills in Chinese medicine, particularly in the fields of orthopaedics and traumatology. I speak Mandarin, English and French.
